

Villa Della Nurra

Region: Sardinia Sleeps: 4

Overview

Villa Della Nurra is a sleek, contemporary designed bungalow on the open northwestern Nurra plains of Sardinia, set within acres of lush olive groves farm. Positioned in a tranquil, rural corner between Porto Torres and Alghero, the villa marries slick style with traditional Sardinian charm.

Both simple but effective, Villa Della Nurra offers newly built, low-key and unpretentious holiday living: gorgeous neutral and minimal interiors will suit those aesthetes who go for a modern look. Stream-lined, open plan living at its best.

The lateral layout and wonderful soft interior light ensure this is not just another quaint little holiday cottage. Design finesse is apparent, from exposed wooden beams, state-of-the-art kitchen, trendy spotlighting - subtle luxury sets the tone.

Decked out in stunning soft greys, whites and charcoals, the living space is both cosy and contemporary - Villa Della Nurra provides both function and style without going overboard. Sleek counter-tops, ample kitchen space integrated with an informal open plan dining area - this space offers the most natural setting for a family or friends who enjoy understated living.

The large living space flows naturally onto the large, shaded terrace. Wooden shutters and exposed timber offer a little nod to local style. The vibrant red sofa and flat screen TV are in keeping with the casual, upbeat feel of the villa. Air-conditioned throughout, WiFi is provided along with all the little luxuries guests would expect.

The two bedrooms are spacious and crisp; again, unfussy in keeping with the very sleek and natural feel of the villa, yet finished to a high level of quality. Two to six guests can comfortably enjoy a wonderful stay at Villa Della Nurra - the living room sofa doubles as a sofa bed; ideal for casual, fun holidaymakers who are happy to forego formality.

The villa is truly special when it comes to the softening evening light; outdoor living space is provided to perfection by way of a poolside terrace. Imagine gazing across those open plains to the silvery mountains on the horizon with a glass of wine as the sun goes down.

The swimming pool is generously proportioned with modern, outdoor shower, and the barbecue and surrounding areas are built in the natural, local stone.

Villa Della Nurra hasn't been overthought, yet manages to offer effortless Mediterranean style with both ease and panache!

Location & Local Information

Set within an enormous private estate hosting a working olive farm in the heart of the Sassari region, Villa Della Nurra offers the best of serene, rural charm while only being a few minutes from the beach at Argentiera. The latter is known for its particular rugged beauty where the sandy coast meets silver-tone mountains. Just thirty minutes by car from Alghero airport, guests will immediately feel the drop in pace to align with the gorgeous, natural Sardinian way of life.

With ample choice, the coastline is varied and interesting: the beaches of Ezzi Mannu, Le Saline, Pazzona and Punta Negra are also worth exploring. The northern Sardinian coastline is known for being much more varied than the south; namely, rocky little-hidden bays and coves, interspersed by sandy beaches (these are short rather than long.) The granite cliffs and mountains add character to this undiscovered corner of Sardinia.

La Corte is a mere four kilometres away; ideal for picking up fresh bread and tasty provisions. For a little more choice by way of shops, Palmadula is just ten kilometres from Villa Della Nurra. With no more than three hundred inhabitants, this is small-town authentic Sardinian life rather than a commercial, glittering resort.

The area is rich in archaeological sites and natural beauty. The Parco Geo Minerario dell'Argentiera is a former mining area - today an abandoned lead and silver mine and pre-historic village. For those keen on archaeology, the Olbia Museum offers warships and remains of Nuraghic civilisation; likewise, the Roman remains including the bridge and baths of Maetzke.

The city of Porto Torres is rich in both culture and history, overlooking the magnificent Gulf of Asinara. Steeped in a Roman and Medieval past, every corner will tell a tale of archaeological treasure. From the Basilica di San Gavino, the Romanesque basilica, to the Palazzo di Re Barbaro, the original walls of the central Roman baths, to the seven arch bridge - Ponte Romano - visitors will uncover endless historical intrigue.

What we love

- The interior design factor is perfection for those minimalists! So chic and understated, this villa's very simplicity is what makes it so special
- Those far-reaching horizon views are just wonderful; across the open plains to the mountain views, a real taste of secluded Sardinian life is preserved in this spot
- The natural flow between indoor and outdoor living is so effortless; for laid back breakfasts on the terrace with fresh coffee and pastries to an evening poolside glass of wine, guests will just relax into the laid-back spirit of the villa
- The location is both rural whilst being minutes from the beach and close to all that downtown Porto Torres has to offer

What you should know...

- Villa Della Nurra is ideal for nature lovers and outdoor pursuits enthusiasts rather than those who prefer a more commercial and glitzy resort vibe
- This villa is set up for informal living for relaxed holiday makers rather than those who prefer privacy of multiple separate living spaces
- Surrounding grounds host a fully operational olive oil producing farm, ideal for those wishing to learn about the process, machinery and gain knowledge on subject
- The final leg of access road to the villa is on an unpaved road, a sturdier car is recommended - in a secluded spot this villa is ideal for "kicking back" but it would be a shame to miss out on all the local area has to offer
