Location & Local Information

The centre of Calpe is around 4 km away from the villa, so it's so easy to jump in the car to go food shopping when you're running low on groceries. It's also a fascinating and historical place to explore.

Visit the hilltop old town of Calpe, and you'll find winding, cobbled streets and plenty of charming shops to browse. There are also plenty of churches and museums to explore, with the parish church of Nuestra Señora de las Nieves and the Archaeological Museum being particular highlights. As it's by the coast, there are several beaches at Calpe for an afternoon spent relaxing after some serious sightseeing.

Playa de la Fossa is the main beach in Calpe and is only a 5-minute drive if you're heading there from the villa - or just a short walk from the town centre if you're already in Calpe. It's an excellent beach for families as the sand is lovely and elegant and there's a long promenade lined with restaurants, bars and shops.

The main feature of the beach is imposing Penyal d'Ifac, a rocky outcrop rising from the sea. It was declared a national park in 1987, which is no surprise when you find out that it's home to over 300 species of animal, including several seabirds and many rare plants.

Characterful Altea is less than 25 minutes away by car and is another must-visit destination with an old town area. The streets here are lined with pretty whitewashed houses, with the central square being home to many traditional restaurants and cafés.

The famous blue-domed church of Parroquia De Nuestra Señora Del Consuelo is a stunning building to visit, with ornate white and gold decoration to the interior. It sits high on a hill above the town, so a walk up to explore this religious site will also give you beautiful views over Altea and the sea.
