Getaway to a seaside retreat, where Continental Croatia meets the Adriatic - that's what is on offer when you visit Istria. A heart-shaped, 3600-square kilometre peninsula is in the country's northwest, and it offers rolling hills, rich culture, renowned cuisine and plenty of spots to explore.

It's an incredibly popular holiday destination, always topping many lists of must-visit places in Croatia. This area differs from some other regions of Croatia due to its strong Italian influence that can be felt in the region, which is because Istria used to be part of Italy during the early 20th century.

This villa is located 3000m from Žminj in Central Istria. This area is known as the heart of Istria, and as you explore the labyrinth of narrow streets, you can get lost in the stunning scenery and history that surrounds this place.
