

Villa Lilo

Region: Nerja Sleeps: 6

Overview

This attractive 3-bedroom villa lies around 7km from Torrox and 10km from the popular Torrox Costa coastal strip, east of Malaga. Its quiet location in the countryside is ideal for a peaceful break, and you have a gorgeous private pool and terrace all to yourselves too.

The house enjoys a beautiful natural setting, with views of the hills and countryside from its magnificent terrace and outdoor areas, which include covered seating areas and a roof terrace. A superbly positioned outdoor lounge area, as well as hammocks, dining space, and a barbecue, give you lots of options for relaxing and entertaining. The 6 x 4m swimming pool is equally impressive, and available year-round.

Inside, Villa Lilo features a light, modern living space with TV, seating, air-conditioning and a wood-burning stove. There is more room to dine with seating for six at a stylish dining table, and the kitchen is similarly well-appointed with wooden units, a dishwasher, fridge freezer, oven and ceramic hob. Three bedrooms include double and two twin rooms, making this villa a good family choice. Each is kept cool with either a fan or air-conditioning, and one has its own en-suite bathroom. A second bathroom is also available.

Torrox itself is a reasonably sized, inland village with a pretty centre, and it lies around a 40-minute drive from Malaga city. The coast, which shares its name, is around 4km from the village and is known for its lighthouse and Blue Flag beach, El Peñoncillo. Its Paseo Marítimo promenade is the place to be for dining out and entertainment, and shopping; you may come across some traditional street markets, especially in summer. Torrox Costa hasn't become too overdeveloped as a holiday resort, so for a wider choice of things to see and do, it's well worth making the drive to Malaga, where there are regular events and fiestas. On the way, you could also stop at Rincon de la Victoria or the beautiful beach of the town's neighbour, La Cala del Moral.

Location & Local Information

Much more than a holiday resort, the city of Malaga has plenty of surprises in store. It's a charming place to be with something for all tastes, whether you are travelling as a family, on a romantic break, solo or with friends. Beautiful gardens, roof terrace bars and some of the best shopping in southern Spain offer just some of the alternatives to beach life. And it's a city with a full calendar of events, from the big Malaga Fair each summer to the Malaga Jazz Festival in the autumn.

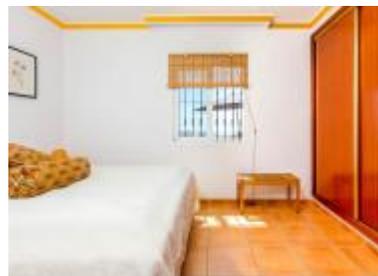

If you're returning to Malaga after several years, you'll find that the city has really upped its game as a dining destination in the last decade or so. While the tourist traps still exist, you should also be able to find some high-quality options without too much trouble. There are lovely bakeries, chocolate shops for your coffee and churros, and fish restaurants serving Malaga's signature pescaito, for example. Countless tapas bars ranging from OK to gourmet are all over the city also.

Something new visitors may not expect is the city's vast range of museums – there are more than 30 to choose from! Many focus on the art of various styles, but there are also museums dedicated to musical instruments, cars, flamenco and local history, as well as the locally produced wine. A huge range of traditional markets adds colour to Malaga's shopping scene also, and there are plenty of independent shops to discover along with all the usual chains. Elegant Calle Larios is a good place to start for well-known international fashion brands.

Both in Malaga itself and around the Costa del Sol, you have a huge range of water parks, amusement parks, wildlife parks and the like, affirming the region's credentials as a family favourite. If that's really not your thing, you'll be reassured that Malaga has some chilled-out, child-free spots worth checking out too – as the region's home of jazz, there are plenty of clubs to discover, while dozens of rooftop bars offer similarly cool vibes with views to match.
