Location & Local Information

Villa Sroy is set on the almost unknown Natai Beach; it is a quiet, peaceful and exclusive escape in the sublime Phang Nga Province, just 6km north of Phuket, overlooking a 10km stretch of soft, white sand.

Natai Beach still has none the commercial distractions and tourist-trodden thoroughfare of some of Phuket's other hot spots, instead, visitors will come across coconut groves and secluded lagoons along the quiet road which runs parallel to most of the beach.

This home is set among the glistening waters and uninhabited islands of the Phang Nga Bay. Located on the Andaman Coast in the south of Thailand, Phuket is the country's largest island and has drawn visitors for decades, while some of the islands are virtually untouched by man and haven't seen modern life.

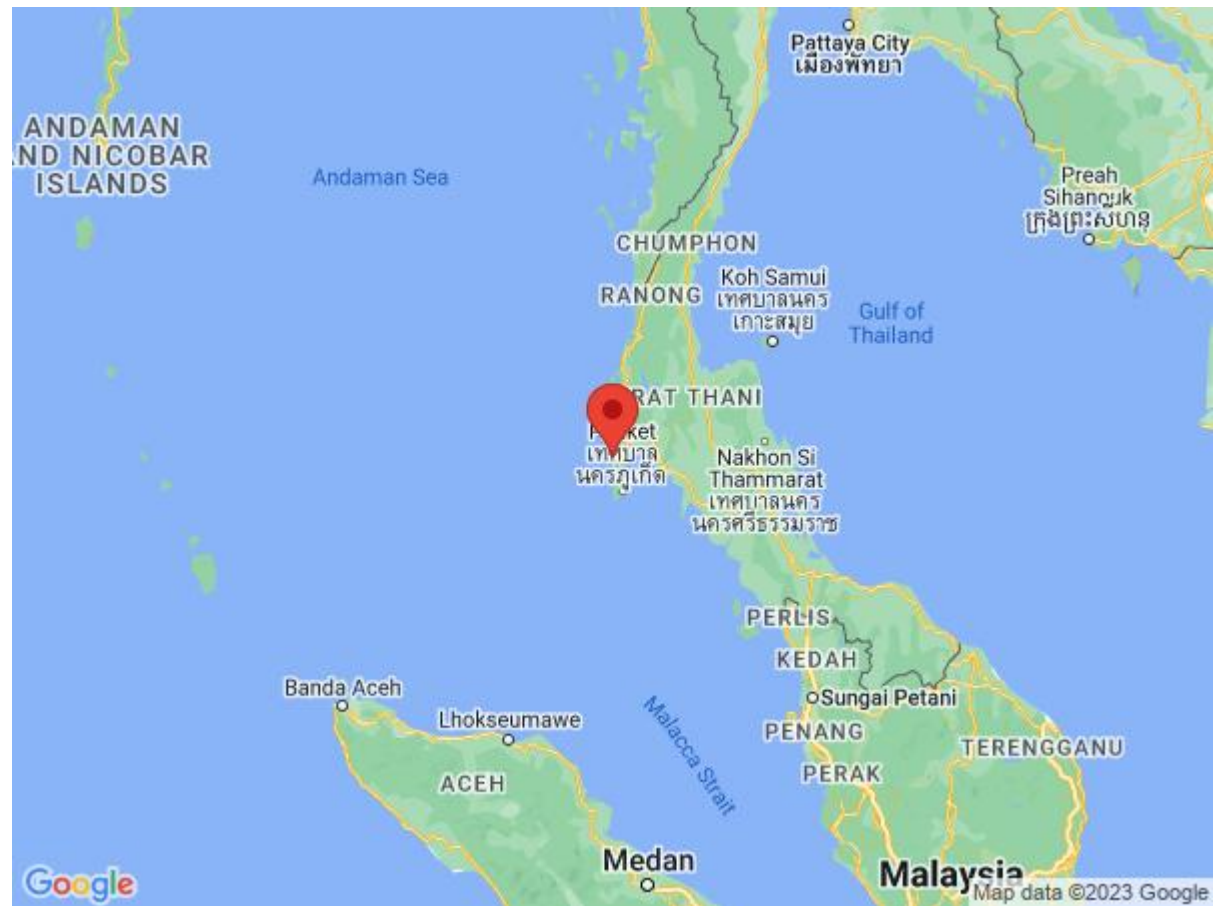

With dense mangrove forests, elephant sanctuaries, jungle treks and water sports, this region is rich with opportunity.

From Phang Nga Bay, taking a speed boat for a day trip out to explore some of the hundreds of tiny paradise islands surrounding Phuket will be a memory-making choice. For a touch of local flavour, catching a Muay Thai fight at Patong Boxing Stadium will offer an adrenaline-pumping environment.

When in Phuket, the 45-meter marble Buddha statue is a "must-see" - it can be seen from all across the south of the island and is one of Thailand's main attractions. The trek to the top of Karon hill to see the icon is worthwhile, not least for the stunning views it offers of the Andaman Sea and is particularly worthwhile at sunset hour.

Phra Nang Beach features 450m of sugar-white sand, clear waters, two small islands (Koh Rang Nok and Nai), offshore coral reef, and caves, set against the backdrop of striking limestone cliffs.

Venturing further afield, The Bang Pae Waterfall (Phuket's biggest waterfall) is a luscious waterfall with shallow, wading waters, picnic spots and surrounding hills for hiking. Whether it be the bustle of Phuket Town or the seclusion of Natai Beach, this spot has something for everyone.
