Nai Harn Beach is also very popular. With beautiful soft sand and crystal clear water, it is untouched and stunning. There are some bars, restaurants and souvenir shops. Surin Beach is known as 'Millionaires Row'. It is expensive with high-end cuisine and plenty of rich and famous visitors.

Keen rum drinkers may enjoy a trip to the Chalong Bay Rum Distillery. High-end white rum is produced. You will enjoy a tour of the distillery and then take part in a cocktail workshop.

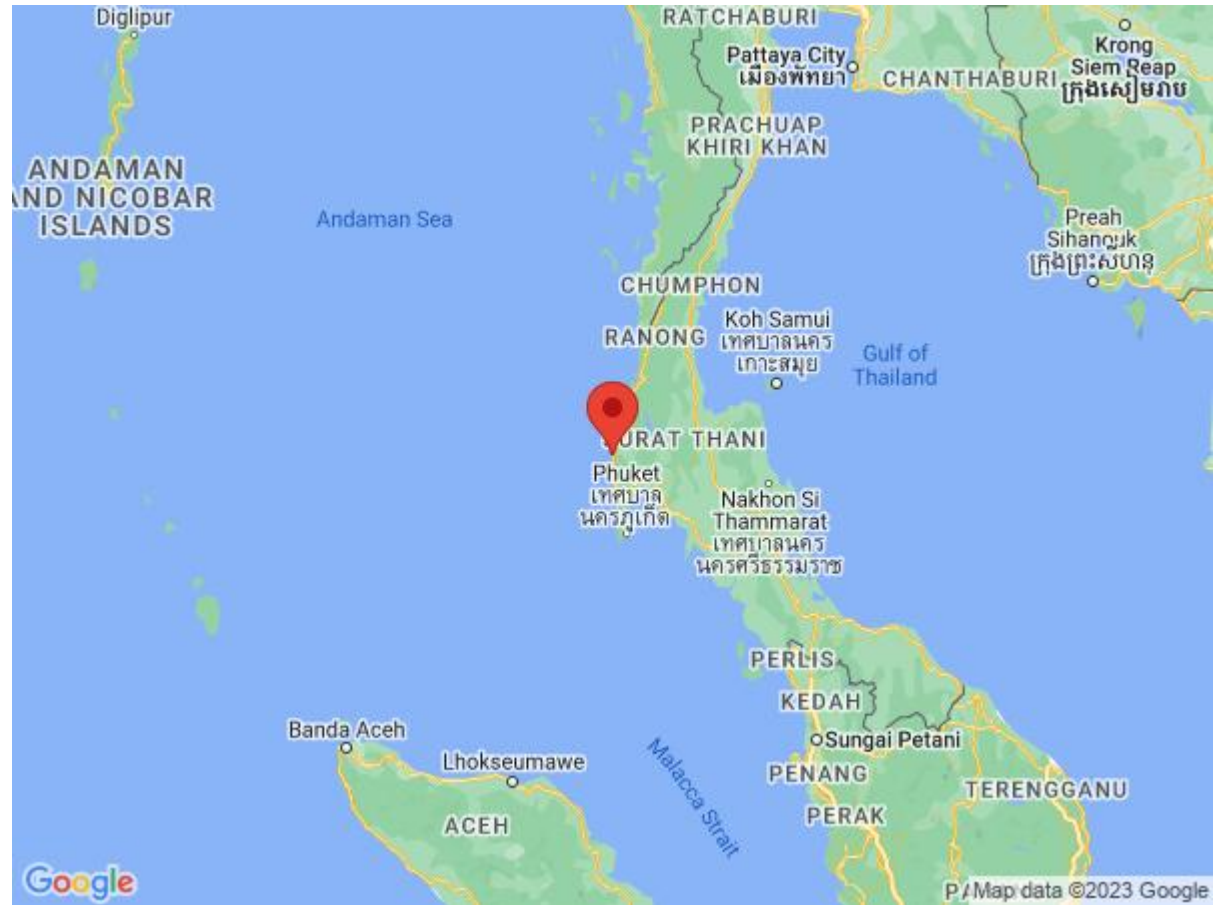

Phuket's 45 metres tall Big Buddha is one of the most famous landmarks on the island. It is made from white Burmese marble with sparkles in the sunshine. The Buddha sits on top of the Nakkerd Hills so you will have an amazing panoramic view of the island. You will visit the sound of dhama music and bells. The most important of the Buddhist temples of Phuket is Wat Chalong. It has been open to visitors for over a century. The highlight of your visit will be the Grand Pagoda which is beautifully decorated with Buddha images and pictures that depict his life story.

The Phuket Town Weekend Night Market is known by the locals as Naka Market. You can buy fruits, old curiosities, clothes, food including golden buttered corn on the cob and animals! It is good to arrive late afternoon. Bangla Road closes to traffic as the sun goes down. Touts will try to get you inside the ping pong shows, and tailor shops and beer girls and restaurant owners will compete for your business. The atmosphere is buzzy with plenty of street entertainers.

Karon Viewpoint is the most popular viewpoint on the island. It is just to the south of Kata Noi Beach and looks out over the Andaman Sea in one direction and the three west coast beaches on the other. Other popular viewpoints are Windmill Viewpoint, Monkey Hill Viewpoint and Rang Hill Viewpoint.
