

Chateau Falaises

Region: Normandy Sleeps: 8 - 15

Overview

Experience characterful château life close to the glorious Alabaster coast of Normandy at this charming holiday home near Saint-Valery-en-Caux.

Staying at Château Falaises will make you feel part of a bygone era with its air of French elegance alongside historic comfort. The wood-panelled lounge features cosy sofas around the impressive fireplace whilst the traditional kitchen is perfectly equipped and ideal for keen cooks, a private chef or perhaps even a cookery class. Serve your feasts in the grand dining room with beautifully arched windows framing the picturesque views of the glorious gardens.

Across the château there are nine bedrooms featuring a range of beds meaning flexible options whether you are a family or simply good friends wanting to spend quality time in characterful surroundings. Welcome additions to this inviting home include a TV and DVD player, music library and games room with table football and board games for all to enjoy.

Outside the gardens are so spacious, a tranquil retreat with century-old trees, vast lawns and so much nature all around you. Gather together on warm summer evenings drinking local cidre or calvados with the backdrop of your magnificent holiday home.

Exploring this region is a joy with so many wonderful places so near. Start off in the charming harbour town of Saint-Valery-en-Caux, just 4km away, and its vast beach partly backed by the Alabaster cliffs this region is so famous for. Follow this with a trip to one of France's most beautiful villages, Veules Les Roses, with its river, waterwheels and thatched cottages, and visit its delightful beach with its promenade and pier.

As well as many other brilliant beaches, there are breathtaking coastal paths for keen walkers, golf and tennis close by and lots of opportunities for horse-riding and cycling. Further afield, soak up the atmosphere at the vibrant Saturday morning market in Dieppe or spend the day experiencing classic French seaside life in Honfleur or Deauville.

With such an alluring coast, wonderful food, spectacular scenery and family-friendly activities, this part of Normandy makes a fantastic holiday destination for everyone.

Location & Local Information

In the Seine-Maritime, a beautiful part of Normandy, and just 4km from the Alabaster coast, Château Falaises is set in its own spacious grounds, part of a small village close to Saint-Valery-en-Caux.

Dieppe ferry terminal is around a forty-minute drive away whilst other ports such as Calais, Le Havre and Caen-Ouistreham are about two to three hours by car, making this a great location if arriving by ferry or Eurotunnel. Alternatively, take the train from Paris to Yvetot.

Saint-Valery-en-Caux is the place to go for a supermarket, shops, restaurants and a Friday morning market as well as learning about its interesting history in the second world war. It's a pretty harbour town which is filled with flowers in the summer and has lots of characterful architecture and nice places to eat. Further inland, the town of Cany-Barville has a greater choice of amenities including a lovely Monday morning market.

You are also well positioned for an 18-hole golf course (also offering foot-golf!), less than 5km away, as well as horse-riding opportunities in the area. For a unique experience, there is even a flying school close by which offers sight-seeing excursions by air!

This glorious part of the Normandy coastline, Pays de Caux, is known for its white Alabaster cliffs. The beach at Saint-Valery-en-Caux is a good place to start with its pebbly shores (and sand as the tide stretches out) partly backed by incredible cliffs.

Veules-les-Roses is one of France's 'Plus Beaux Villages' with its pretty river, water wheels and thatched cottages. Head to the beach with its promenade, pier and charming beach huts – at the weekend look out for people selling the exquisite salt and freshwater oysters, Veulaise, a true local delicacy.

Saint-Aubin-sur-Mer has a large sandy beach as well as a brilliant fish market. There is also a kite-surfing school or head to the sailing centre at Plage de Quiberville-sur-Mer. Travel down the 200 steps on the famous stone staircase at Sotteville-sur-Mer or follow some of the incredible walking paths along this part of the coast.

Varengeville-sur-Mer has yet more wonderful scenery and you can walk through the famous valley between the towering cliffs at Valleuse de Vasterival. The gardens at Bois des Moutiers are also a must for nature lovers.

Dieppe is another fine day out, especially on a Saturday morning with one of the largest and arguably best markets in Normandy showcasing all sorts of regional produce. Stop off in one of Dieppe's characterful restaurants and try fish stew, sole, mackerel or scallops.

Other great places a little further afield in Normandy include Fécamp, Étretat and the classic French seaside resorts of Honfleur and Deauville. Alternatively, head inland to discover the historic beauty of Rouen, perhaps even continuing on to Monet's Giverny Gardens, just under two hours away.
