Location & Local Information

Villa Macie is in a fabulous location along the Dalmatian coast near to both Omis and Split, and is perfect for those who want to sightsee and explore. From here you'll be able to enjoy rafting, canoeing and zip-lining on the Cetina river, or be able to take a boat tour to the popular islands of Hvar or Brac. The villa is within easy walking distance of restaurants, a mini market and supermarket, and there is a beautiful sandy beach just meters away.

While you're staying in the village of Duce, you'll more than likely end up at Bracera Tavern, a popular restaurant that serves up a wide range of Mediterranean dishes. There are also plenty of pizzerias in the area, and even more variety if you venture into Omis - known as the city of pirates, which is a great place for sightseeing, shopping and eating! Seafood is always on the menu here, with massive sharing platters (which vary depending on the catch of the day) being a popular option. If you're after Dalmatian favourites, you won't be disappointed in Omis; you'll find plenty of places where you can enjoy traditional Croatian fare such as Peka (a meat and vegetable dish), as well as dishes made with frogs, eels and river fish.

Om is the new kid on the block when it comes to being popular as a tourist destination, but its miles of uncramped beaches and its position on the Cetina river has certainly cemented it there. This is definitely the place to be if you want to avoid the crowds; the whole stretch of coast from Omis to Split is just one huge beach - much of it without a soul to be seen.

Duce nightlife is laid back and chilled - often beginning and ending in the beachside cafes, so if you want to dance and drink the night away your best bet is to again, head to nearby Split or Omis where you'll find more of a vibrant scene.
