Location & Local Information

Biograd na Moru, known locally as simply, Biograd ('na Moru' meaning, "on the sea"), is an idyllic city known as the most indented part of the Croatian coastline - which makes it particularly popular with sailors. Lying halfway between Sibenik and Zadar, it'll come as no surprise that there's a large marina here, and the area is also in a prime location for those who want to visit Croatia's national and nature parks - making it the ideal destination for sea and land lovers alike.

One of the most popular beaches in the area is Soline Beach, a rare sandy gem where you'll find excellent facilities such as changing areas and showers, cafés and bars and rental places where you can hire boats, canoes and dinghies. You'll find plenty of shade here thanks to the pine trees that surround the beach, and that, along with the shallow waters, make this beach an exceptional choice for those holidaying with young children. Closer to the town but along the same stretch, you'll find the pebbly Drazica beach, which also features excellent amenities.

History buffs will want to visit the Biograd Museum while they have the chance, which is home to many items of interest from the area's rich history. One of the most interesting is an exhibit of items found aboard a sunken Venetian ship that was lost off the coast in the 16th century and that lay undisturbed until it was discovered by a fisherman 400 years later in 1967. You'll also find a number of beautiful churches in the town, including the 18th century Church of St Anastasia and the Church of St Rocco.

After all that sightseeing, you won't be hard-pushed to find somewhere to enjoy a bite to eat, with plenty of restaurants, bars and cafés dotted through the town, all serving up traditional dishes prepared with fresh, local ingredients.
