Location & Local Information

Villa Inka is located in the village of Milna, on the Island Brac in a serene location with views of the sea, which is a mere ten-minute walk from the property. The pebbled beach gives way to wonderfully warm and clear water lending many wonderful opportunities to swim, snorkel and enjoy looking at the underwater world.

You're in close proximity to a minimarket, bakery, and restaurant and a short drive to shops, pharmacies and many more restaurants as you enter the centre of Milna.

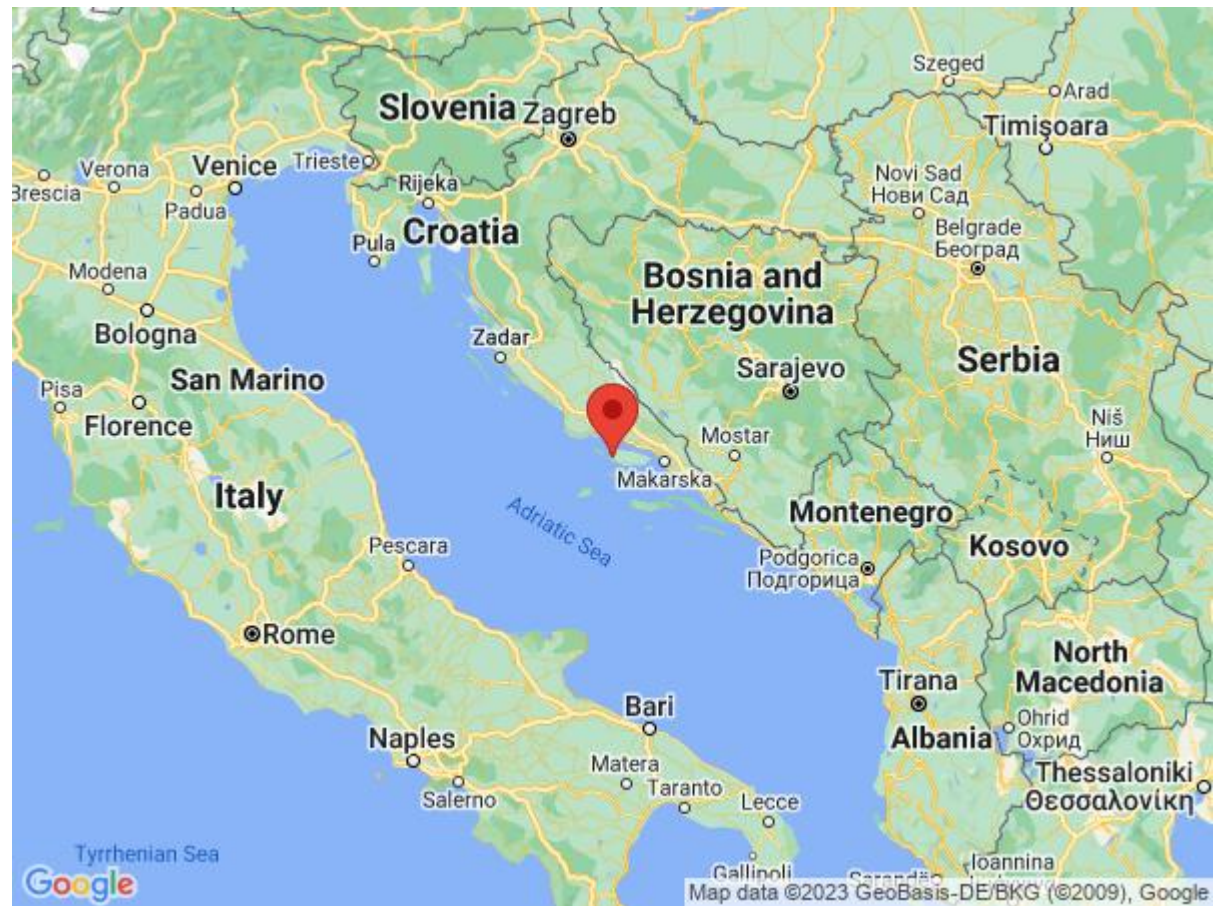

Milna itself is a traditional Mediterranean fishing village – a wander around will make you feel you've travelled back in time to the peace and ease of a gentler age. Here, life is slow and calm making it the perfect getaway from our hectic modern world. Star attractions are the harbour and marina, with stretches of sand either side as well as pebble beaches including Vlaska Cove. During the summer months, catamarans frequently travel from Split to Milna and then on to the island of Hvar and the walled city of Dubrovnik. You may also wish to arrange a private boat which can take you from Split to Milna.

Although the area itself is humble and peaceful, there's a tremendous amount to do if you're looking for a more active holiday. As you might expect, a lot of activities are centred around water, with options like sea kayaking, scuba diving, snorkelling and kite-boarding. The Adriatic Sea is striking and there are many ways to become more acquainted with it. One of the best ways to feel the flow of the area is to explore it beneath the water. Boat rentals are also popular so that you can travel along the west coast of the island of Brac. You'll be able to explore the Dalmatian archipelago.

There's also opportunities to dive into traditional Island life. You may wish to visit the old town of Donji Humac, where you can take a workshop to learn how to process stone. The oldest part of the island is known as Skrip, and here you can see how oil olive was traditionally made, while also enjoying a taste. The surrounding views are truly something, and include sights of Vidova Gora, Bol and the many islands of the area.

The south coast of Brac Island is intriguing. From here, you can easily book a day trip to Hvar Island, with its history and fine-dining experiences. Brac itself is home to many a hike or bike trail, some of the more popular trails take you from Golden Horn in Bol, to Vidova Gora, Murvica to the fascinatingly named Dragon's Cave. If you enjoy mountain biking or cycling, Brac is a great place to indulge your passion.

If you wish to explore Croatia's second most popular city of Split, there are several options, including a catamaran or combined drive to Supetar, and then a ferry. In total it's about an hour and a half journey. Split itself is a fascinatingly historic city and offers everything you might expect. As a UNESCO world heritage site, it's an absolute must-see whilst in the area.

What we love

- The close proximity to the sea, making it easy to go for a morning dip.
- We love preparing BBQ's outdoors with family. The preparatory area next to the BBQ makes it so much easier and being able to eat outside in warm weather is one of the things we go on holiday for.
- The hydro-massage pool! A perfect way to relax as the sun goes down.
- We love the additional services that can be arranged, including an in-villa chef and boat tours and skippers to stunning islands (Golden Horn is must!)

What you should know...

- The island of Brac is quiet and peaceful, but there are lots of things to do if you go looking for them.
- Be mindful that many locals may not speak English – bringing a phrasebook may be helpful.
- Not everyone on the island takes card, and they may follow local hours. Having cash on your person will be easier.
- The nearest beach is pebbled so you may wish to bring swim shoes.
