This extensive golf course was designed by Robert Trent Jones Sr. and is considered to be one of the finest courses in the profession. Guests are encouraged to explore the complexities of this course and revel in the challenge that it provides. There is also a fine-dining restaurant located on-site, meaning that guests can enjoy a delectable meal after completing a game. Prices for this type of activity are fairly reasonable, costing €89 for an 18-hole game.

If you are looking to uncover the nuances of this energetic culture, a local market is a perfect place to visit. Atarazanas Market can be found just over an hour away and gives guests the opportunity to browse through a collection of fresh produce. This market is well renowned amongst Spanish foodies as there is a wide variety of seafood and olive stalls on show. The exterior of this market may be its finest feature, showcasing an expansive stain glass window at the top of the building. There is even a small seating area outside the market where guests can come to enjoy some authentic tapas and a range of alcoholic drinks.

Jardin Botanico Molino de Inca is one of the finest botanical gardens in Europe, highlighting the sheer beauty of the region. Guests can explore the expertly preserved garden and take in the incredible water features that are scattered across the landscape. This attraction was once an old flour mill and was transformed into a rural paradise in 2003. These gardens also include a small museum that goes into more depth about the origins of the park. There is also a crocodile park located close by, further emphasising the diversity of Costa del Sol's ecosystems.
