Location & Local Information

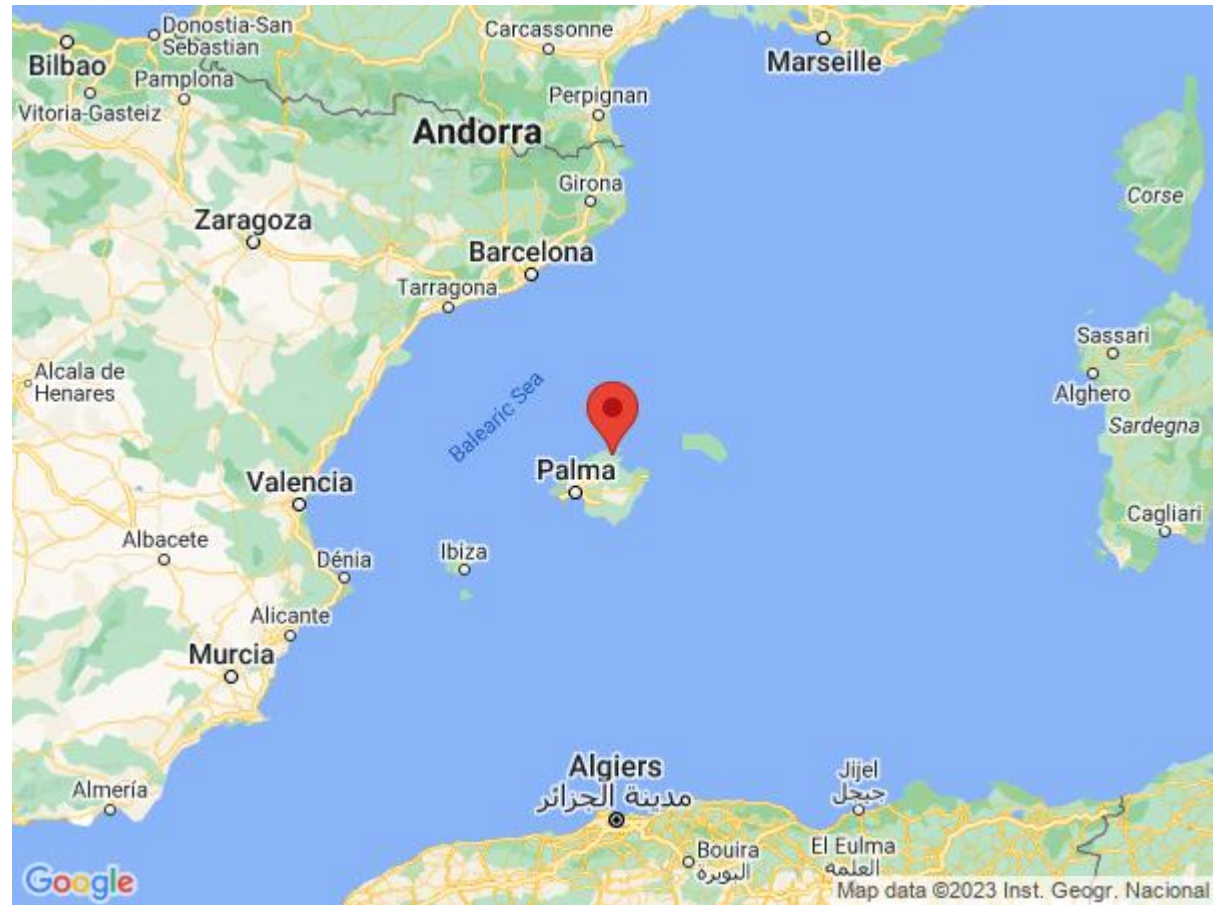

Pollensa is a truly beautiful region and is home to a striking collection of enticing tourist attractions and destinations. If you are a lover of European history, a trip to Placa de l'Almoina is a must-do activity. This small square contains a grandiose house that was once used as a safe haven for some of Pollensa's poorest citizens. The house was run by a group of wealthy university students who used their own funds to provide essential food and water to the local peasants. This square also hosted a vicious battle, which saw the local people defend themselves against harmful ambushers. To remember the bravery of these individuals, modern-day citizens hold a moving ceremony every August. Placa de l'Almoina can be found just a short walk away from the town centre.

Formentor Lighthouse is one of Pollensa's most popular landmarks and is situated just under an hour away. This iconic monument was first constructed in 1863 and stands an astonishing 210 metres above sea level. Originally, this lighthouse was used to guide small fishing boats away from the sharp rocks that reside at the base of the shore. To this day, the lighthouse has managed to save and protect the local fishing population of Pollensa. In addition to its functional uses, Formentor Lighthouse was an incredible source of inspiration for a wealth of writers such as Gerardo Diego and Blas de Otero. Guests are welcome to take a short drive toward the peak of the lighthouse and bask in the panoramic views that surround them.

For those looking to explore an alluring underworld, Alzinaret Caves is a real treat. These caves are said to date back to the Middle Bronze Age, presenting a wide variety of well-preserved artefacts for guests to observe as they travel through. Despite their dated origins, these caves were actually discovered in 1927 by acclaimed British archaeologist Wilfred Hemp. As such, there is a cave named Number 7 of Hemp in his honour. Guests are free to explore the 14 caves at their own pace, and there is even a set of benches located outside for guests who would prefer not to go inside. Alzinaret Caves are based just over 10-minutes away.
