The Es Raco d'Arta resort was first formed in the 1960s after designers Antoni Esteve and Jaume Danus decided to renovate a series of 13th-century houses. In turn, they were able to create a premium wellness resort that has managed to attract visitors from far and wide. This resort also showcases a range of sustainability practices, such as the use of eco-friendly air conditioning units as well as sustainable toiletries. Thus, guests can enjoy their stay at this impeccable resort and do not have to worry about harming the planet.

These include a zingy fig salad as well as the expertly prepared lamb that is served with grilled Mediterranean vegetables. Moreover, this fine-dining establishment is best known for its expansive outdoor seating area that provides unobstructed views of the mountains and valleys that sit just a short distance away. For those looking to indulge in a touch of relaxation during their time on holiday, a meditation workshop can be a perfect solution. Guest will meet a trained mindfulness instructor who will guide them through the key principles of this archaic practice. During a series of attention training exercises, you will be invited to focus on the beautiful sights, sounds, and smells that are found in this natural space. Students will also learn the history of mindfulness and how it can benefit them in their day-to-day lives. As a result, this is an ideal activity for anyone looking to detach from the hustle and bustle of everyday life and truly find their inner zen.

This resort also hosts a comprehensive spa that uses a number of pools in its detailed treatments. These water-based treatments allow guests to complete a range of movements that could not be achieved on land, heightening the relaxation of each session. The pools also allow guests to immerse themselves in a completely unique sensory experience. Watsu expresses a number of Zen Shiatsu treatments that can allow guests to resolve any blocked traumas that may still be residing in the body. If you are looking for more traditional treatment, the aromatherapy massage involves a series of essential oils and active ingredients to ensure that your whole body feels rejuvenated and relaxed.
