For the days where you would rather unwind at a spa, dine at fine-dining restaurants and take yoga classes outdoors, you can do all these plus more at the exclusive resort where the villa is set.

Though the home is an independent villa which offers guests privacy and uninterrupted sea views, it is nestled within the landscaped grounds of a luxury resort. Guests staying at the villa have full access to all of the amenities at the main hotel, including sports facilities such as a tennis centre, pilates classes, fitness boot camps, a diving centre, an exclusive spa and great restaurants. A fantastic entertainment programme is also available, including shows for adults and kids.

The villa is equipped with a fully-fitted kitchen, but guests also have the option to indulge in breakfast and dinner service within the hotel. You could also book breakfast by your private pool or a range of meals prepared by the chefs from the comfort of the home. Everything you could need for a special and memorable trip is available for guests. Whether you wish to have your villa stocked with groceries before you arrive, take part in wine-tasting sessions or book a private helicopter tour, all you need to do is liaise with the guest experience manager, who will be happy to help.

Falkensteiner Villa Bellavista is a stunning place to stay for a trip with friends or family. The chic home is flooded with natural light and decorated in neutral beachy tones and sleeps seven guests across four bedrooms. The accommodation here is all on one floor, and throughout the home, you will find doors leading out to the garden and the sea-view terraces. The living spaces include a large living room with an L-shaped sofa and a lovely dining room. When you wish to retire for the night, there are four beautifully appointed bedrooms; two doubles, one room with twin beds and one with a single bed. All rooms are serviced by a contemporary en-suite bathroom.

Outdoors, the oasis-like garden offers a serene retreat away from the rest of the resort. The gorgeous grounds are dotted with olive trees, lush planting and spacious terraces. Just outside the home, you will discover an inviting infinity pool and a covered dining space where you can tuck into a delicious evening meal as the sun sets over the bay.

When you wish to head to the beach, it couldn't be easier as the resort has access to a pristine private beach with sun loungers for guests. The soft sand and the calm water make it an ideal spot for a lazy afternoon. There is even a restaurant at the beach which would be the perfect place for dinner. Within 8km of the home, you can find a range of picture-postcard beaches, coves and rocky inlets, and the town of Villasimius, a historic fishing village with pastel-coloured buildings and atmospheric trattorias. ## Location & Local Information

With everything from unspoilt, sun-drenched coastlines to bustling urban centres, the Southeast of Sardinia is a fantastic place to spend a holiday. Close to Falkensteiner Villa Bellavista, you will be able to access all of the incredible facilities of the resort within just a short stroll. When you wish to head out and see more of the area, you can find beaches, hiking routes and villages easily.

The closest amenities to the home can be found within the resort itself, where you can discover many restaurants, a spa, sporting facilities and a private beach. When you fancy going out for the day, the small town of Villasimius is just 6km away. Due to its essential, strategic setting, this town has been settled for thousands of years. Over the years, Villasimius has been attacked and conquered countless times, even by pirates! The area sustained itself historically through granite mining and agriculture, and though the streets are now filled with holidaymakers, there is still a feel of this rural heritage.

The centre of Villasimius is a maze of colourful buildings filled with shops, cafes, restaurants and bars. If you want to sample some of the local seafood, why not find a charming restaurant with views over the coast? As well as its lively centre, Villasimius is known for its incredible beaches, which are said to be some of Sardinia's finest. Spiaggia di Porto Giunco is one of the most beautiful; with powdery white sand and warm turquoise water, it resembles a Caribbean bay and is an idyllic spot to spend the day sunbathing or snorkelling. The whole coast is littered with such beaches for you to explore, and you can visit the nearby Stagno di Notteri, a protected area with a lake. This stunning lake is home to plenty of birds and marine life, including pink flamingos, which flock here.

If you would like to peruse a wider selection of shops and discover more historic attractions, then you should drive 48km to Cagliari, the capital of the island and was the capital of the Kingdom of Sardinia for five hundred years. If you are searching for winding streets, ancient buildings and amazing views over the area, start exploring Castello, the city's old town. Most of the architecture in the old town hails from the 13th century onwards when the nobles and ruling classes began to move into the area as thick walls defended it. Cagliari Cathedral, the old gate of Porta Cristina and a 14th-century palace called the Palazzo Vice Regio are some highlights here.

There are also plenty of museums to learn more about the area's history, such as the brilliant archaeological museum, the cathedral museum, a museum for the former Jewish ghetto and even a tile museum! On top of having an incredible old town, Cagliari is also packed with shops, cafes and restaurants and is lined with gorgeous beaches. Stay until evening falls, and you can have a drink or two in some of the trendy bars on the seafront.

There is plenty more you can see and do in the south of Sardinia, including horse treks through the green landscape, visiting magical caves and boat trips around the coast.
