Location & Local Information

Villa Hoopoe is located between the majestic Twelve Apostles mountain range and the shimmering Atlantic Ocean in Camps Bay, Cape Town. Beyond being a local summer hotspot, it's a place where beach vibes meet chic elegance, creating a lively atmosphere that lingers long after the sun dips below the horizon.

Camps Bay Beach, with its Blue Flag status, is the region's crown jewel, a magical stretch of pure white sand bordered by ocean waves on one side and the looming mountains on the other. Whether you're here for a picnic, a brave dip in the chilly Atlantic waters, or a leisurely stroll along the palm-fringed boulevard with trendy cafes and shops, the beach promises an experience that's as vibrant as the sunset views it offers.

For those seeking a quieter escape, a mere 10-minute drive south unveils Oudekraal beach—a hidden gem sheltered by granite boulders. It's a haven for sun-seekers, offering wind-free sunbathing and calm waters perfect for swimming and snorkelling. Shaded picnic sites beneath milkwood trees beckon, inviting you to master the art of the South African braai with the sound of the waves as your background melody.

Camps Bay isn't just about beaches; it's a gastronomic haven. Paranga, with its upscale charm and ocean views, offers a fine dining experience specialising in freshly prepared sushi. Meanwhile, Codfather Seafood & Sushi, a local favourite, boasts a cosy fireplace, a welcoming family atmosphere, and a menu expertly guided by friendly waiters through the daily selection of fresh seafood.

Nature enthusiasts can embark on an adventure along the Pipe Track, an undiscovered trail from Kloof Nek to Camps Bay, treating hikers to ocean and mountain vistas along the old water pipeline route. For a scenic journey between Camps Bay and Hout Bay, the Camps Bay African Craft Market awaits with traditional Southern African souvenirs, hand-carved statues, beaded jewellery, and more—adding a touch of local flair to your Cape Town experience.
