Location & Local Information

The medieval village of Certaldo (20-minute drive) is the birthplace of Renaissance humanist poet Giovanni Boccaccio. Not only is this an easy and enjoyable port of call for all your necessities, thanks to its shops, supermarkets, restaurants, bars and cafes, but its cobblestoned streets and flower-strewn facades make it idyllically Italianate.

The Boccaccio House Museum is certainly worth a visit. Sunset is a great time in the town as it enjoys panoramic view of the surrounding region. After watching the sun dip behind the rolling hills, make your way to the Enoteca Boccaccio Di Casini Andrea for an aperitif.

Certaldo is also renowned for the particular sweetness of its onions, a sweetness which has meant local gelato shops offer up the curious but delicious onion-flavoured gelato. Gelato Alla Cipolla is one of these. In addition to onion-flavoured gelato, the town also has a famous onion jam that tastes incredible with cheese or in bruschetta. The jewel of Tuscany, Florence (50-minute drive) is the region's capital of culture and the perfect destination for day trips. One of the most beautiful and artistic cities in Europe, guided tours can take you past many of the city's must-see sights, including Giotto's bell tower, Ghiberti's gates, Brunelleschi's dome, and of course the vast array of museums and galleries such as the Uffizi Gallery.

The Vespa is an emblem of modern Italy, and the perfect medium by which to tour through the Tuscan hills. Many tours are based out of Florence, taking in beautiful nearby attractions including Piazzale Michelangelo, and finishing with a countryside lunch. Or if solid ground isn't quite your thing, there aren't many better ways to see Tuscany than via hot air balloon. Trips depart at dawn and voyages tend to last for approximately one hour. A continental breakfast is provided upon landing.

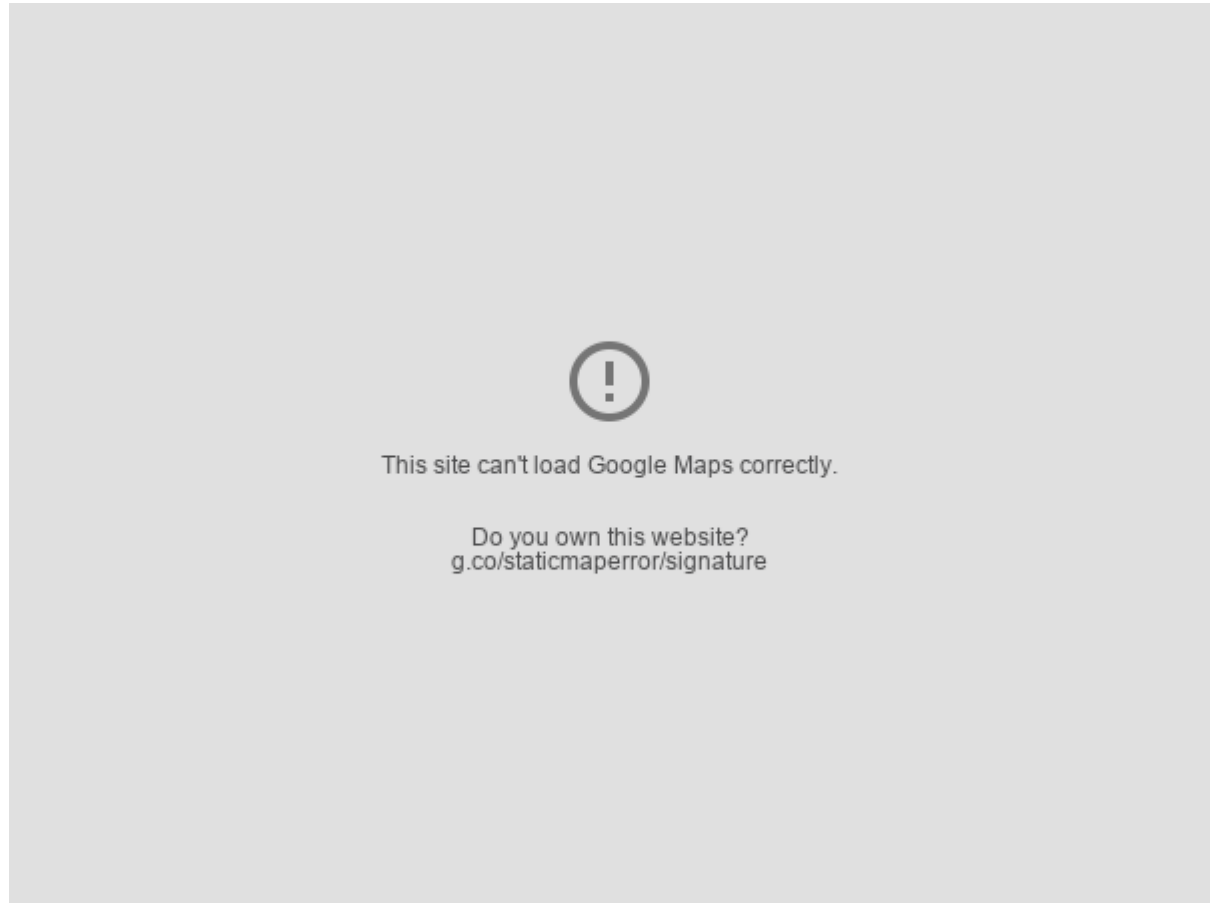

Siena (50-minute drive) is utterly remarkable and certainly worth a visit. Despite its great history, tall towers, breathtaking cathedral and grand piazza, Siena is relatively small and easy to get around. The Torre del Mangia is likely the first thing you'll notice in the Piazza del Campo thanks to its historic height (when constructed it was the tallest tower in modern-day Italy).

Despite its height though, it's not too difficult to scale and the views from the top are unbeatable. With a host of other incredible sights, including the Basilica Cateriniana, the palatial Piccolomini Library, and the Duomo, there's treasures everywhere you look in Siena.
